Child marriage and divorce in Yemen

By Jenny Cuffe
BBC World Service, Assignment

A narrow path leads up from the mountain town of Jibla, through century-old houses, and turns into a mud track before reaching the door of Arwa's home.

The nine year old child lives with her parents and six brothers and sisters in a humble, two-roomed house overlooking the mosque built by her namesake, Queen Arwa, who ruled Yemen 900 years ago.

She knows nothing of wealth and power but, in her own way, she has helped make history.

Arwa is the youngest of three Yemeni girls who recently went to court complaining they were married against their will and asking for divorce - an astonishing display of defiance that has prompted the government to review its law on early marriage.

The child's dark eyes shine from a pale face framed by her black headscarf. Her expression is eloquent yet she struggles to find words for what she's suffered.

Child marriage alert in India

Indian authorities have stepped up efforts to prevent child marriages on an auspicious Hindu day on Wednesday.

Child marriages still take in parts of Rajasthan

Officials in western Rajasthan state said that local authorities were trying their best to stop such marriages.

But there have been reports of child marriages taking place in the state before the auspicious day of Akha Teej.

Though the practice was outlawed in 1929, boys and girls are still married off forcibly in some parts of India.

Marriages of girls under the age of 18 and boys under 21 are illegal in India.

The authorities claim that they are vigilant this time.

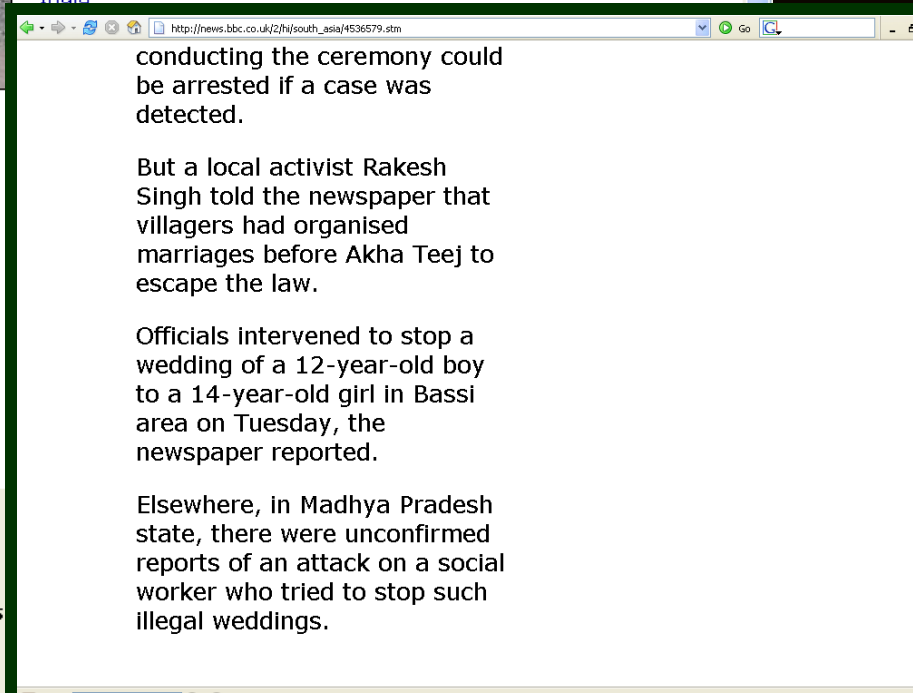

"We have directed district collectors and superintendents of police in all the 22

“ Efforts have also been made to generate public awareness against child marriages through street plays and corner meetings ”

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A Minnesota judge has ruled that a 13-year-old boy with a highly treatable form of cancer must seek conventional medical treatment despite his parents' objections on religious grounds.

In a 58-page ruling Friday, Brown County District Judge John Rodenberg found that Daniel Hauser has been "medically neglected" and is in need of child protection services.

A national group that monitors faith-based neglect of children says the parents charged with reckless homicide for praying as their 11-year-old daughter died of diabetes are the first in Wisconsin accused of such a crime. The executive director of Child Incorporated says at least 309 children have died in the United States in the past 25 years after medical care was withheld on religious grounds.

More raids on Texas polygamy sect

Texas authorities have continued raids on a ranch belonging to a breakaway Mormon sect, removing a total of almost 200 women and children since Thursday.

Sect members believe men must have at least three wives to get to heaven.

Police officers first raided the ranch after reports that a 16-year-old girl was physically and sexually abused.

Detectives are looking for evidence of a marriage between the girl and a 50-year-old man. She is thought to have had a child when she was 15.

Grandma's Marathon: Remembering a fallen champion

Kevin Pates Duluth News Tribune

There will be a moment of silence before the start of Saturday's 32nd Grandma's Marathon. Standing on North Shore Drive, just south of Two Harbors, Stephen Muturi will gather his thoughts and emotions before the day's task of running 26.2 miles.

He'll remember close friend and countryman Wesley Ngetich, last year's champion, who was killed Jan. 21 at Emarti village in Kenya's Trans Mara district. Ngetich was caught in the middle of an incident that turned violent. He was 31 and had two wives and three children, ages 8, 6 and 1. "Wesley was a peacemaker. . . ."

EMEK HEFER, Israel — With eight wives and 67 children, Shahadeh Abu Arrar has given new meaning to the term "family man."

Abu Arrar, 58, is a member of Israel's impoverished Bedouin Arab community. But even in a traditional nomadic society where men commonly have several wives and many children, Abu Arrar is exceptional.

"I'm thinking about a new wife, No. 9," he told the Israeli daily Yediot Ahronot in a recent interview. "There are many women who wish to marry me and there is no lack of women. I never had a problem with such things."

South Africa's President Jacob Zuma has defended polygamy during a question and answer session at the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland.

Jacob Zuma took a third wife earlier this month

Mr Zuma, who married his third wife earlier this month, said it was part of his Zulu culture and did not detract from his belief in women's equality.

Asked if he loved all his wives equally, he replied: "Absolutely".

Correspondents say Mr Zuma's belief in the traditional practice of polygamy has divided South Africans.

Some support him but many younger people believe it should have no place in a modern society.

Unpalatable but true: cannibalism was routine

By Tim Taylor
(Filed: 15/10/2003)

The science of cannibalism has just become respectable, as irrefutable bio-molecular evidence that we have eaten each other for millennia spurs renewed efforts by archaeologists, geneticists and anthropologists to find out when we started to do it, and why.

Prehistoric cannibalism triggered human evolution

01/24/2005 15:23

Human sacrifice was a widespread practice in ancient times

Archeologists, who excavated a settlement of ancient people in Central Russia, found many bones on the site. There was nothing unusual about the finding at all: the bones were the remains of animals that people of the Stone Age ate. Specialists, however, were surprised to find human bones among animal bones too. Scientists did not make any special conclusions about it; they simply mentioned the strange fact in their reports.

Modern people prefer not to think about cannibalism. They simply refer to it as a vestige of ancient history, or a horrible tribal ritual. It is a rather uncivilized point of view indeed. The majority of animals do not eat their own species, although humans used to practice cannibalism commonly.

Cannibalism May Have Wiped Out Neanderthals

Jennifer Viegas, Discovery News

Feb. 27, 2008 -- A Neanderthal-eat-Neanderthal world may have spread a mad cow-like disease that weakened and reduced populations of the large Eurasian human, thereby contributing to its extinction, according to a new theory based on cannibalism that took place in more recent history.

Aside from illustrating that consumption of one's own species isn't exactly a healthy way to eat, the new theoretical model could resolve the longstanding mystery as to what caused Neanderthals, which emerged around 250,000 years ago, to disappear off the face of the Earth about 30,000 years ago.

"The story of Neanderthal extinction is one of the most intriguing in all of human evolution," author Simon Underdown told Discovery News. "Why did a large-brained, intelligent hominid that shared so many traits with us disappear?"

To resolve that question, Underdown, a lecturer in the Department of Anthropology at Oxford Brookes University, studied a well-documented tribal group, the Fore of Papua New Guinea, who practiced ritualistic cannibalism.

Ancient "Human Sacrifices" Found in Peru, Expert Says

Kelly Hearn
for National Geographic News
June 4, 2008

Three possible human sacrifice victims have been found at a 4,000-year-old archaeological site in Peru, an archaeologist says.

The apparently mutilated, partial skeletons (see photos) could overturn the peaceful reputation of the Pre-Ceramic period (3000 B.C. to 1800 B.C.) in the Andes mountains—a time generally seen as free of ritualized killing and warfare.
