Trivia Question:
Who won last year’s Super Bowl?

Generally speaking—last year being an exception—the best parts of Super Bowl Sunday, now a major American de facto holiday, are not the game itself but the Super Bowl Ads (and Buffalo Wings). The Super Bowl IS the Super Bowl for ads, with the 2018 ads costing “at least” $10,000,000 a minute. Thirty-second spots during Super Bowl LII in 2018 are being sold for “at least” $5,000,000; in 2016 they cost about $4,800,000 / 30-second ad, plus another million dollars or so to market an ad. [SuperBowl-Ads.com App is available on the App Store.]

And there are big winners and losers in the Super Bowl Ads contest. (I predict Avocados from Mexico will be a big loser this year.)

(It is reported that last year Budweiser spent $9,803,567 on TV SuperBowl ads to try to convince beer drinkers that their product was drinkable beer <https://www.ispot.tv/events/top-2017-super-bowl-commercials>.)

State-of-the-art brain research in neuromarketing has been key to the development of Super Bowl ads over the last decade or more. (In the Press|Consumer Neuroscience, 2017: How to make the most memorable TV ad, according to neuroscience -- Business Insider, 22 March 2016; Neuromarketing – Where Brain Science and Marketing Meet.)

We’ll explore the neuropsychology of Super Bowl ads as we talk about perception and cognition, and about Thinking, Fast and Slow.
This week we’ll briefly do an Anthropology Day 2018 Progress Check, review the Panel Discussion of last week, discuss the Semester Project and Project Groups and have a look at Old Business as time permits.

Participant Observation continues to be the main method of Cultural Anthropology, and observation of one sort or another is central to all of anthropology. This week we’ll have a look at observation, participant and otherwise. If you have not finished your Activity assignments of last week dealing with perception and optical illusions, please do that prontito.

Selective Attention Tests

(For the last time): If you have not yet taken the Selective Attention Tests in preparation for participant observation research, and our discussion of research methods, please do that ASAP. (Be sure to take both tests, even if you have taken them before.) Read and follow the directions carefully.

Take the Selective Attention Tests in preparation for participant observation research, and our discussion of research methods. (Be sure to take both tests, even if you have taken them
