

An illustration of a Native American woman with dark hair, wearing a bright yellow dress and a large orange shawl. She is sitting on the ground in a forest, holding an open letter in her hands and looking at it intently. A woven basket filled with blueberries sits on the ground in front of her. The background shows dark tree trunks and a glimpse of a blue lake or river in the distance. The style is reminiscent of traditional Native American art.

First thing . . .

(if you are not already in Moodle)

go to your

 moodle2

course management site and check it out . . .

How do you find

 moodle2

in the first place?

Further instructions follow,
but if you want,
and your browser permits,
clicking on the URL that follows
in the next slide will take you to your Moodle home . . .

(your browser may require that you double-click)

There is another link at the end of this program

<https://moodle2.umn.edu/>

(your browser may require that you double-click)

If your browser does not allow you to click on the above URL just enter it in your browser window . . .

Continue on here for further instructions . . .

There is another link at the end of this program

Your Moodle screen may look something like this . . .

If you get this screen, go to “University of Minnesota Login” . . .

The screenshot shows the Moodle interface for the University of Minnesota. At the top right, a red box highlights the text "You are not logged in." Below the header, the "University of Minnesota Moodle" banner includes a "moodle2" logo. A navigation bar contains a "Home" link and "Login to the site". The main content area is split into two columns. The left column, titled "University of Minnesota Login", contains a "Login" button circled in orange, with a large orange arrow pointing to it from the right. The right column, titled "Read-Only Anonymous Access", contains a "Read-Only Anonymous User Access" button. At the bottom center, the text "You are not logged in." is displayed above a "Home" button.

Pre Assessing Yourself (Due by the end of Week 2--Friday, 1 February 2013), 11:55 p.m. 🔍

This is like a short survey to see what your views and takes are on anthropology of food. Once every one has completed this feedback, everyone will be able to see the results (anonymously).

Before you get deep into the course, briefly describe your food habits and ideas, and what you already know about the Anthropology of Food.

At different points during the semester we will return to these questions to have a look at the various subjects.

Have you chosen your topic for your Project?

Please enter the title of your topic for your Term Paper and Final presentation in the Wiki. (It is recommended that you do your presentation on your term paper research. You can do two different topics if if you really want to, but generally that isn't such a great idea.)

You will receive credit for turning in your Project topic information.

If you haven't chosen a Problem topic yet, you must get a move on--look at ideas from other students or set up a time to discuss with me the potential ideas, or why you are struggling to come up with an topic.

One thing that you should keep in mind when approaching these readings, which I will talk more about as the class progresses, is that, as mentioned above, the exams are open-book. And for that you should normally just need to read the text carefully and be able to discuss the materials therein intelligently. That is, you should read the text as if you had picked it up at an airport bookshop on the way to Europe or the South Seas because you were interested in the subject and wanted to know more about it.

PLEASE NOTE: Some students are used to principally memorizing facts in classes. This class is not one where that is the focus. It is about investigating new topics, reading, listening, synthesizing ideas, thinking, exploring, and becoming familiar enough with the various subjects, peoples and places to carry on an intelligent conversation in modern-day society. Please keep that in mind when thinking about, and getting ready for, the exams.

A Note on Extra Credit Papers

Failure to comply with the above codes and standards when submitting an Extra Credit paper will result in a penalty commensurate with the lapse, up to and including an F final grade for the course, and, at a minimum, a reduction in total points no fewer than the points available for the Extra Credit project. The penalty will not simply be a zero for the project, and the incident will be reported to the UMD Academic Integrity Officer in the Office of Student and Community Standards.

If you use others' words and/or works you MUST so indicate that with the use of quotation marks. Failure to use quotation marks to indicate that the materials are not of your authorship constitutes plagiarism—even if you have a citation to the source elsewhere in your paper/work.

Patterned failure to so indicate that the materials are not of your own authorship will result in an F grade for the course.

Other instances of improper attribution will result in a 0 (zero) for the assignment (or a reduction in points equal to the value of an Extra Credit paper), and a reduction of one grade in the final grade of the course.

All incidents will be reported to the UMD Academic Integrity Officer in the Office of Student and Community Standards as is required by University Policy.

Teaching & Learning: Instructor and Student Responsibilities:

"UMD is committed to providing a positive, safe, and inclusive place for all who study and work here. Instructors and students have mutual responsibility to insure that the environment in all of these settings supports teaching and learning, is respectful of the rights and freedoms of all members, and promotes a civil and open exchange of ideas. To reference the full policy please see: <http://www.d.umn.edu/vcaa/TeachingLearning.html>"

Final Exams:

"All 1xxx-5xxx courses offered for undergraduate credit should include a final graded component or end of term evaluation that assesses the level of student achievement of one or more course objectives. All final graded components are to be administered or due at the time and place according to the final exam schedule and not during the last week of class. To reference the full policy please see: <http://www.d.umn.edu/vcaa/FinalExams.html>"

Excused Absences:

"Students are expected to attend all scheduled class meetings. It is the responsibility of students to plan their schedules to avoid excessive conflict with course requirements. However, there are legitimate and verifiable circumstances that lead to excused student absence from the classroom. These are subpoenas, jury duty, military duty, religious observances, illness, bereavement for immediate family, and NCAA varsity intercollegiate athletics. For complete information, please see: <http://www.d.umn.edu/vcaa/ExcusedAbsence.html>"

Appropriate Student Use of Class Notes and Course Materials:

"Taking notes is a means of recording information but more importantly of personally absorbing and integrating the educational experience. However, broadly disseminating class notes beyond the classroom community or accepting compensation for taking and distributing classroom notes undermines instructor interests in their intellectual work product while not substantially furthering instructor and student interests in effective learning. For additional information, please see: <http://www.d.umn.edu/vcaa/ClassNotesAppropriateUseof.html>"

Students with Disabilities

It is the policy and practice of the University of Minnesota Duluth to create inclusive learning environments for all students, including students with disabilities. If there are aspects of this course that result in barriers to your inclusion or your ability to meet course requirements – such as time limited exams, inaccessible web content, or the use of non-captioned videos – please notify the instructor as soon as possible. You are also encouraged to contact the Office of Disability Resources to discuss and arrange reasonable accommodations. Please call 218-726-6130 or visit the DR website at www.d.umn.edu/access for more information.

Course Overview

It's usually a good idea at the beginning of each course to read the official "Course Description" and have a look at the "Course Objectives and Outcomes."

A course may be exactly what you are looking for, or it may not. If it is not, it's a good idea to figure that out as soon as possible, and in time to find the course you might really be looking for.

So take a minute to have a look at the "official" UM items below.

In the Week 1 materials we'll have a little more informal look at what the course is all about.

And you can have a look at the course "Resources" available to the class for a bird's-eye view of the semester's topics and reading, video, and assignment schedules

Another thing you might do is have a preview look at the course calendar and General Information WebPage on the regular UM Web.

And, as always, if you have questions ask—either myself, or your classmates via the "General Student Discussion" area.

—Tim Roufs

NOTE: "In this class, our use of technology will sometimes make students' names and U of M Internet IDs visible within the course website, but only to other students in the same class. Since we are using a secure, password-protected course website, this will not increase the risk of identity theft or spamming for anyone in the class. If you have concerns about the visibility of your Internet ID, please contact me for further information."

Course Description:

Advanced survey and comparative study of the relationship between food and culture in the past and present. Topics include the domestication and evolution of plants and animals, biological and cultural aspects of the production, distribution, preparation, and consumption of food, and an analysis of the social and cultural significance of food—including food preferences and taboos, food and religion, food and identity, food and power, gendered division of labor in foodways, beliefs and values about foods, food symbols and metaphors, new food technologies, and the globalization of contemporary food systems.

Course Objectives and Outcomes

1. American Anthropology has long emphasized a fourfold approach to the study of the humankind—one embracing physical anthropology, cultural anthropology, archaeology and linguistics—and one regularly doing so with a comparative methodology and explicitly holistic theoretical perspective. It is an aim of the proposed course to demonstrate those interrelating characteristic qualities of the discipline with a foremost topic, the "cultural universal" of food.
2. Within this comparative holistic traditional disciplinary framework the course aims to convey a basic understanding of fundamental biological nutritional needs, "derived" due by the end of Week 05, Friday, 22 February 2013, 11:55 p.m.

- The informal statement can be very straightforward. It's a simple statement of, "Here's what I'm interested in doing. . . . Here's why I'm interested in that. . . . Here's what I think will be useful for that project. . . . What do you think?"
- Or, it can be something like "I'm thinking about doing a project on X or Y, but can't make up my mind. Here's what I'm interested in, and why. . . . Here are some things that look like they might be useful for the project. . . . What do you think?"
- A more formal statement (Abstract) of what you eventually decide upon isn't due for another two weeks.)
- Week 5
- s2013 Midterm Exam Submitted Question to Wiki
due to the moodle wiki by the end of Week 05, Friday, 22 February 2013, 11:55 p.m.
- You can review the questions and my notations there, and use them as study questions
- Week 7
- s2013 Project formal Promissory Abstract and Working Bibliography (up to 20 points)
due by the end of Week 07, Friday, 8 March 2013, 11:55 p.m. (submit them together)

Only the materials in the center panel are required.

The items and materials in the sidebars are extra materials for you to use or not, as you see fit.

The screenshot shows a Canvas LMS course page for 'Anthropology of Food — Anth 3888-390'. The page is divided into three main sections: a left sidebar, a central main panel, and a right sidebar. The left sidebar contains navigation links like 'Home', 'User guides', and 'Student support forums'. The right sidebar contains course navigation links like 'Videos', 'Chats', and 'Participate'. The central main panel is titled 'Main Panel (required material)' and features a large image of a boat on a river with the text 'PLEASE NOTE: This material is required for the course. It is a required material. The content is required for the course to be successful.' The word 'Extra' is written vertically in large letters on both the left and right sides of the main panel, with a red bracket highlighting the central panel area.

Why?

Research shows that people who know a little about their teachers . . .

A man with glasses and a grey hoodie is sitting in bed, reading a book and cards. The book is titled "BUTTONS MY FAVORITE BO" and features a black bear and a brown bear. The cards are from "The Little Book of Dylan" and show a cartoon rabbit. The man is wearing a red shirt under the hoodie. The bed has a colorful striped blanket. There are two lamps on either side of the bed, one with a yellow shade and one with a white shade. The background is a plain wall.

Chocolate

(including cocoa)

In the News

Chocolate \ˈChɒkˈoʊlət/, noun. Spanish expression, from the Mexican name of the cacao. Compare to [Cacao, Cocoa.] -- Webster's Online Dictionary

Aztec statue of a male figure holding a cacao pod

Chocolate is created from the cocoa bean. A cacao tree with fruit pods in various stages of ripening.

Scientists believe the first cacao beverages were sipped from vessels like this one, which was found in northern Honduras.

New analyses of similar pottery fragments suggest people have been enjoying chocolate for more than 3,000 years—about 500 years earlier than previously believed

[see note on slide formats]

(NOTE: This is a long slide set as it covers some very important background information that will be referred to often as we go through the semester. Please bear with it to the end. And it will take a little longer to load, so please bear with that also. There is no video presentation scheduled for this and next week as the base slide sets tend to be a little longer than "normal.")

- the four fields of general anthropology
- culture as a primary concept
- comparative method as major approach
- holism as a primary theoretical goal
- fieldwork as a primary research technique
