1.0 What's Happening Week 10?

Love is in the Air . . . in Some Places . . .

Last week we had a look at life and death as part of universal “Life Cycle” events. Fundamental to Life Cycle events, of course, is courtship, mating, and marriage (not necessarily in that order), which normally starts the cycle over with birth and the subsequent rearing of children.

For most of us, courtship and marriage includes love. For most of the world it probably does not—at least not at first. More often marriages are arranged by families or other interested parties—as you saw in Kypseli, Greece, and a little bit in Argaki, Cyprus—and couples fall in love—if they fall in love—after they marry rather than before.

This week love is in the air, in class at least, and former distinguished Harvard anthropologist David Maybury-Lewis will introduce us to European Romantic Love. Romantic love, by and large, is primarily a European idea. Maybury-Lewis calls his presentation “Strange Relations”, and you’ll see why.

“Strange Relations” brings us to Europe, former European colonies in America and Africa, and the country of Nepal—one of the very few countries that successfully resisted European colonization.

And we’ll visit those same countries with the news of the week.

It’s a good week—with so much love in the air—to catch up, and especially to catch up on your research for your Term Paper and Presentation.

2.0 VIDEO EXPLORATIONS

Real People . . . Real Places . . .

Videos for the Semester

You probably noticed that in Kypseli in Greece and in Peter Loizos' Greek village of Argaki in Cyprus there was not a lot of . . .

“Romantic Love”.

Notwithstanding that, romantic love—actually quite a strange idea—comes largely from Europe (obviously more French, English, Iberian, and Italian than Greek). And like McDonald's and Caribou Coffee it seems to be catching on and sweeping young people off their feet worldwide.

We'll have a look at European Romantic Love this week, in the form of an episode from the series Millennium: Tribal Wisdom and the Modern World, "Strange Relations", with the former distinguished Harvard anthropologist David Maybury-Lewis leading the way.
