Food Fight

On Thursday (Day 15) we’ll have a big Food Fight . . . no, not like La Tomatina in Buñol, Valencia, Spain

(which will next be on 29 August 2018) . . .

Our Food Fight is a Chris Taylor film, the winner of more than a dozen awards. It’s a “fascinating look at how American agricultural policy and food culture developed in the 20th century, and how the California food movement rebelled against big agribusiness to launch the local organic food movement.”

On-line Viewing

In addition, watch the following on-line this week . . .

King Corn and its companion, Big River.

[film homepage]
On-line you should watch on your own (or you can watch it in the UMD Library)

King Corn: You are What You Eat and its companion video, Big River. In King Corn: You are What You Eat you will see “. . . college buddies Ian Cheney and Curt Ellis return to their ancestral home of Greene, Iowa, to find out how the modest corn kernel conquered America.” For Big River: A King Corn Companion, Ian and Curt return to Iowa “to investigate the environmental impact their acre of corn has sent to the people and places downstream.” In a journey that spans from the heartland to the Gulf of Mexico, Ian and Curt “set out to see the big world their little acre of corn has touched.” And their “little acre” touched a lot! You’ll see.

Your Project

If have not yet heard about your “Promissory Abstract”, and Working Bibliography, you will be hearing about it shortly. If you have any questions on your Promissory Abstract and Working Bibliography, please let me know.

If you haven’t already done so, schedule some serious time blocks to work on your Project. And be sure to ask if you have any questions about your Promissory Abstract, your Working Bibliography, or even about your Proposal itself.
One thing you should already have started to think about is how you might present your findings. Generally it is a good idea to pretty much finish your paper before you do too much work on your presentation (your presentation is basically a preliminary report on your work-in-progress paper), but, having said that, it is still a good idea to at least start thinking about what your presentation might be like.

REM EXTRA CREDIT

If you didn’t do quite as well as you might have liked on the Midterm Exam, or if you did better than you even hoped on the Midterm exam but want to “bank” some insurance points for your final course grade, think about doing one (or even two—one of each) of the optional extra credit papers.

There are two Extra Credit options: (A) a case study, and/or (B) a review of a lecture (such as one of the Nobel Conference 46 “Making Food Good” lectures, or the Harvard University School of Engineering and Applied Sciences Series on Food Science) or a food film (other than one of the films we see in class). For the review option you may also compare two or more food films. (Remember from Week 1, one of the main features of anthropology is that it is comparative?)
